Chapter 1 by Brock Thompson

Tulpa- a concept in mysticism of a being or object which is created through sheer spiritual or mental discipline alone

It was alright for Olivia to think what she wanted, even though many people would judge her. It was so childish to still have an imaginary best friend.

Everybody tolerated Olivia's imaginary friend until it wasn't imaginary anymore.

Chapter 2 by the smiling man

Olivia lived with her uncle. Her parents died in a horrific car accident. George (the name of her uncle) was great, but he couldn't take the responsibility to be a father. He wouldn't interact much with Olivia and most of the time he would just ignore her pleas. An imaginary friend was all that she needed. His name was Jim.

girl, after all. She accepted punishment for wrongdoing readily, and Jim, painfully, would dole it out. But these occurrences were far and few between.

Today, Olivia and Jim were going to go to the library.

Chapter 4 by Jesse Sanders

The library being a sanctuary and a peaceful home to Jim and Olivia both seemed quite...unusual today. The library was where Jim had first been created in Olivia's little mind. There were fliers on the white concrete pillars that held the ceiling up stating that the library was being torn down due to insignificant funding. Jim glared harshly at Olivia with his eyes beaming down on her she felt scared. Was Jim going to deal out more punishment for this incident or would he be fair. Olivia took a flier off the wall and began to cry as these thoughts floated in her precious little mind. Jim just glared without speech at the thought of his home being destroyed. Olivia hung her head in silence as they walked over to a table and sat down...
